

National Gallery's lecture focuses Cayman landscapes

'Catboat Duel', acrylic on canvas, from the collection of the National Museum.

THIS month's lunchtime lecture on Wednesday, 27 June at 12:15 pm will focus on landscapes of the Cayman Islands painted by West Bay artist Miguel Powery which are currently exhibited in the "Cayman: An Ever Changing Landscape" exhibition sponsored by Butterfield Bank (Cayman).

The National Gallery lecture will also look at paintings from other local artists, and will offer complimentary sandwiches and drinks, and a stimulating gallery afterward.

Miguel Powery is an established senior artist from the Cayman Islands who has many of his pieces on display in the current exhibition here at the National Gallery.

The exhibition draws on works from the collections of the National Gallery, National Museum and the Cayman National Cultural Foundation. Many of his paintings focus on old Caymanian life.